"BOND'S"

Barnacle, '75

Vol. 41

Hyannis, Mass.

Dedication

Mr. Greg Pearson
and
Mrs. Sally Clifton

Dedication

Teachers help to mold a generation, giving us answers and reasons for believing.

Helping their students learn, they also enkindle them with the desire for learning.

They must be friend, as well as counselor, for only then can they build on yesterday, meet the challenge of today and prepare for the promise of tomorrow.

Mr. Pearson and Mrs. Clifton are such teachers. The Class of '75 acknowledges their guidance and so dedicates this BARNACLE to them.

VOCATIONAL

"Long ago
It must be"

RIGID

Victor Mazarella

A fundamental purpose of education is to prepare the young to live a productive and rewarding life. Vocational education means learning to work effectively. A democratic society depends on the ability of its citizens to develop personal, social, and civic competence; it also requires its citizens to be occupationally proficient. The term "vocational education" has been misinterpreted to mean only those forms of training required in the performance of specialized skills. In the current concept, however, vocational education includes other knowledge, understandings, and skills which will contribute to a satisfying and useful life of employment in a selected occupation.

The youth in our secondary schools have varied talents, aptitudes, interests, and ambitions. Some are best served by programs preparing them for college; some are best served by the vocational programs. Students with abilities and interests fitting them to use their minds and hands in those occupations in industry and trade will gain much from high school vocational programs. Learning experiences and personal growth are primary benefits of vocational education and these goals are exactly what programs in our school and the new regional school promote and project.

One of the most valuable functions of vocational education in the secondary schools is the discovery and development of natural ability. Young people need guidance in making realistic vocational and educational plans. It is imperative that they know about opportunities in all fields of work. Programs of vocational education are characterized by teaching methods which stress "learning by doing". Because people learn to work best in a work environment, every effort is made to approximate actual working conditions and job situations. The developing trend in vocational education is to encourage administrative units of adequate size to provide for the vocational programs and services which the constituent units alone could not economically and efficiently support. Therefore, the Town of Barnstable has become a part of the Cape Cod Regional Vocational Technical High School which is being built in Harwich.

And so, for 18 years Barnstable Vocational High School has served the youth in the area well and because we believe that in order to provide our youth with continued and increasing opportunities in vocational education, we reluctantly are "closing up shop".
